Westminster, October 24, 1799.

THE Lord Chancellor has appointed John Richards, of Reading, in the County of Berks, Gentleman, to be a Master Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

Lord Chamberlain's Office, October 26, 1799.

NOTICE is hereby given, that there will be a Drawing-Room at Saint James's on Thursday the 7th of November next.

Downing-Street, October 29, 1799.

A DISPATCH, of which the following is a Copy, has been received from Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Clinton, by the Right Honorable Lord Grenville, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Foreign Department.

MY LORD, Coire, Oct. 9, 1799.

WHEN I sent your Lordship my last Dispatch on the 2d Instant from Glaris, the Report from General Rosenberg, whose Division composed the Rear Guard, had not reached Head Quarters. I have now the Honor to inform your Lordship that the Enemy, having received a considerable Reinforcement from Zug, renewed on the 1st Instant their Attack near the Village of Mutten, where, in consequence of the Fatigue the Troops had undergone the preceding Day, they had been obliged to halt. A strong Column of the Enemy advanced by the Road in the Centre of the Valley, while Two others, skirting the Foot of the Mountains on each Side, endeavoured to get into the Rear of the Russians. The Division of General Rosenberg consisted of Eight weak Battalions and Two Regiments of Cossacks. Discovering the Intention of the Enemy, he left Five Battalions as a Reserve, and with Three, (the Breadth of the Valley not admitting of a greater Front,) supported by the Cossacks, he attacked the Centre of the Enemy; their heavy Guns for a Moment gave them an Advantage; but nothing could withstand the Steadiness of the Russian Attack. In the Hurry of their Retreat, an Ammunition Waggon was overset, which choaked the only Road by which the Cannon could move; Three Pieces were immediately taken Possession of by the Russians. The Flank Columns, seeing their Centre pierced, fled. General Rosenberg profited of the Confusion of the Enemy, and pursued them beyond Schwitz. In Killed and Wounded they lost above Five Hundred Men and Thirteen Officers, and One Thousand and Twenty Men were taken Prisoners. The Russians had in this Affair about Three Hundred Men killed and wounded.

It was the 4th in the Evening before the Sick and Wounded could be transported to Glaris; the Road not admitting of the Passage of Artillery, the Guns were destroyed; on the 5th the Army marched by the Valley of Semst to Elm; the Difficulty of the Roads made it impossible to remove the Wounded. The Enemy followed the Rear Guard, and gained some trifling Advantages over it during the first Three or Four Miles of the March; upon a well-timed Attack, however, of the Russians, they desisted from any farther Attempt. On the 6th, the Army passed the Danix Mountain, which the Snow that had fallen during the last Week had rendered dangerous, and several Mules and Baggage Horses were lost on the March. The Army is now assembled at this Place, and after Two Days of Repose it is the Marshal's Intention to form a Junction with the Army of General Kosgakow.

I have the Honor to be, &c. &c. &c.

H. CLINTON.

The Right Hon. Lord Grenville, &c. &c. &c.

Translation of the Vienna Extraordinary Gazette of September 27, 1799.

LIEUTENANT PIZZENBERG arrived Yesterday with Accounts from General Melas, that having received credible Information that the Enemy was collecting and receiving fresh Reinforcements on the Banks of the River Stura, he dispatched General Gottesheim with Seven Battalions of Infantry and a Regiment of Dragoons opposite, the Entrance of this Valley, to plant themselves in the most advantageous Position between Fossano and Savigliano, so as to observe accurately all the Motions of the Enemy.

The Enemy in Effect attacked on the 14th Inſtant the Advanced Poſts of the aforeſaid Generals, particularly on the Right Wing: but as he, together with an accurate Knowledge of the Country, profited by the Skill of an experienced Commander of the Out-Poſts, the Enemy was not in a Condition, with all the Advantages of Situation, to gain Poſſeſſion of the important Poſts of Foſſano and Savigliano.

The Enemy, however, having received freſh Reinforcements, amounted to Fifteen Thouſand Men: this Conſideration, and at the ſame Time the Diſadvantage of the Ground interſected by Hedges, where General Gotteſheim might eaſily have been ſurrounded by the Superiority of their Numbers, induced him to advance nearer to the Army, and to evacuate Savigliano in the Evening, and Foſſano after Midnight.

Under theſe Circumſtances the Army on the 16th had encamped at Bra, and although it was not to be expected, that, with the aforeſaid Troops, the Enemy would attempt to attack it in this Poſition; yet their aſſembling in the Valley of Stura, and the Probability of their uniting themſelves with the Troops at Pignerole, as well as with thoſe who had marched from Genoa towards Piedmont, excited the Attention of General Melas, and induced him to attack (before the Enemy could gain Time to execute their Intention) that Part of their Force which was ſeparate from the Reſt and had advanced too forward.

For this Purpoſe a proportionable Part of the Army marched in Two Columns, the Firſt, commanded by General Kray, to Savigliano, and the Second under General Melas to Foſſano. The Columns marched from their Camp at Eleven o'Clock, and arriving at the Place of Deſtination at Half paſt Four, the Attack of Savigliano took place at Five. The Regiments of Furſtenburg and Stuart led the Columns, and performed all that could be expected from brave and heroic Troops. The Commanders of theſe Two Regiments Colonels Auerſburg and Weber, as well as all the Reſt of the Officers, diſplayed Proofs of perſonal Courage and Reſolution. The Enemy defended themſelves with great Skill, and it was not till after the Adjutant Major Bruſch had, by Order of General Melas, attacked with One Battalion of Stuart, and a Party of Cavalry, that they fell into Diſorder and fled towards the Maira, leaving behind them Two Pieces of Cannon. However, as the Enemy ſtill made Reſiſtance on the Left Wing, the Grenadier Battalions of Schiaffinati was ordered to advance upon them with Drums beating and without firing a Shot. This Battalion fully executed its Orders; the Enemy was everywhere defeated, and the Poſt of Savigliano was retaken. The Night prevented the rapid Purſuit of the Enemy. In the meanwhile General Melas received Information that the Attack made on the Side of General Kray had met with the moſt complete Succeſs, that in the ſame Night the Poſt of Foſſano was abandoned, and early in the Morning taken Poſſeſſion of by our Troops.

On this the Regiments of Alvinza and Huff contributed the moſt to enſure Succeſs; and Field-Marſhal-Lieutenant Kray cannot enough praiſe the Diſcernment and Prudence of General Seckendorf, who commanded the Vanguard, and was wounded in the Foot; as well as the diſtinguiſhed Conduct of Colonels Schrökinger and Adorean.

The Enemy's Loſs in Killed and Wounded was above One Thouſand Men, in Priſoners Nine Hundred; and would have been much greater if Night had not come to their Aſſiſtance. Our Loſs amounted to Ninety-two killed, and Five Hundred and Twenty-eight wounded, miſſing Sixty-three; Total, Six Hundred and Eighty-three.

Almoſt at the ſame Time, viz. on the 15th, the Enemy, with a ſtrong Body of Troops, coming from Pignerole, attacked a ſmall Body of ours at Airaſco, and drove in our Fore-Poſts. As ſoon, however, as he began to advance againſt Schalenza, and was formed with his Front near the Chauſſeé, having ſent forward a Number of Tirailleurs, Colonel Schauroth, Commander of the 7th Regiment of Huſſars, and of a ſmall Corps of Infantry, ſuffered him to approach within Canniſter-Shot, and then opened ſo briſk a Fire from Six Pieces of Cannon, ordering at the ſame Time an Attack on the Left Flank and in the Rear, by Two Diviſions of Huſſars, that, after an Engagement which laſted till the Night, the Enemy was completely repulſed, and Colonel Schauroth reſumed his former Advanced Poſts.

This Expedition, in which the Enemy loſt in Killed and Wounded above Four Hundred Men, is ſaid to have been led on by General Championet in Perſon.
